

Calgary Equity Index: Economic Dependency Ratio (Single-Parent Families) By Census Tract

The amount of government transfer payments received by single-parent families or persons not in census families, compared to their employment income. The Economic Dependency Ratio (EDR) measures how much families or individuals rely on government benefits relative to their earnings. For example, an EDR of 4.69 means that for every $100 earned from employment, $4.69 is received in government transfers. The Calgary average for this indicator was 34.4 in 2019.
