

Calgary Equity Index: Human and Social Wellbeing Domain Score By Census Tract

The Human and Social Wellbeing domain score is an equally weighted combination of indicators that represent the diverse social and demographic characteristics of Calgarians. A high domain score reflects areas with greater inequities and more human and social wellbeing needs (such as areas with a higher percentage of vulnerable population groups and lower levels of education). A low domain score reflects areas with fewer inequities and fewer human and social wellbeing needs (such as areas with fewer vulnerable population groups and residents with higher levels of education). The Human and Social Wellbeing domain score for Calgary was 28.9 in 2024.
